Feared It Would Be Murder.

Those who saw the act went sick at the sight, and feared that murder would be done. But the next moment the negro tossed his weapon into the river and ran on again.

Before many seconds more Officer Hulcher had grabbed the fugitive by the collar. From all that had previously happened the negro appeared to be a desperate and vicious character. But it was otherwise, as his explanation proved. The negro's name was Charles Brent, and he lives with his wife in Powhatan county.
